C. Walk-Ins

Depending on availability, walk-in attendees may be able to purchase a registration at the day of the event.

RECOMMENDATIONS

This section are recommendations for running Pop-Up Gen Con and running events at Pop-Up Gen Con. There is no obligation to adopt any of these ideas, they are merely suggestions.

Events

Events are the heart of Gen Con. Gen Con is known as the “Best Four Days in Gaming” in part because of the thousands of events that occur during the convention. Events are any specific activity that occurs at Gen Con, including demos, full play through of games, tournaments, and non-gaming (“companion”) events.

Demos

Short play introductions of games. A way to give a sense of the game mechanics without committing to fully run game. Demos can last anywhere from 15 to 60 minutes, depending on the game; follow the publishers’ suggestions for timing, if available.

We recommend you establish space in your store to continuously run at least two concurrent demo sessions, for as many games and customers as you can reasonably schedule.

Demos are the heart of Pop-Up Gen Con and should be the basis for your Pop-Up Gen Con event.

Full Play

Any game that is played through its entirety. Full play can be the games received in your kits and/or games from your store/library.

Consider having additional dedicated space/tables for customers who want to take a deeper dive with a game with a full play experience.

Tournaments

If you wish to host any kind of tournament or head-to-head competition for any of the games during Pop-Up Gen Con, you may do so as space and timing allow.

Companion Events

Activities that aren’t game specific, but game/gamer related.

The most successful Pop-Up Gen Con’s last year, in terms of positive customer feedback, were those that included companion events. It is understood that staffing may be limited, but we strongly encourage you to consider adding companion event(s) to your Pop-Up Gen Con to give it a real convention feel. Be creative! You know your audience best so come up with something that will appeal to them.

Here are some companion event suggestions ...

Costume Contest: A simple activity to run that will increase the ambiance and social media engagement of your event tenfold. You can run a complicated contest if you have the staff to do so but we recommend keeping it simple.

Encourage attendees to dress in costume. Have a Best Dressed or Best Costume 1st and 2nd place categories, include an adult and child category. Staff can determine the winner(s). Provide an award/prize to winners or to encourage people to come in costume. It’s up to you. Promote them on our social media, etc.

Miniatures Paint & Take: If you have the space and some active interested painters at your store, it would be worthwhile to set aside some paint and miniatures, along with an experienced painter to provide tips and tricks for a paint and take area. Soliciting minis from companies you have relationships with to get supplies; or reach out to local gamers looking to thin their backlog.

Plan more paint & take events; an intro to painting class would be a great way to get adults and kids into the store and interested in the hobby. A very popular and easy to run additional event is speed painting, where a group is given a certain amount of time, usually an hour or 45 minutes, to all paint the same mini, and are judged at the end. This is a great spectator event, which generally has a lot of interest at Gen Con, and simple requires one person to watch the time, a set of minis, and a few judges at the end.

Seminars/Panels: Chances are, your store has regulars that have some connection to the gaming industry. They may have a game published themselves, whether on their own, through Kickstarter, or via an actual company. If you've identified these people, reach out to them about running a panel or seminar. If you haven't identified these people among your attendees, you can put out a call for them on your social media. Topics that would likely be popular among your attendees would be:

- How to Sell Your Game: Host would explain the nuts and bolts of using self-funding, using a crowd-based funding such as Kickstarter, and the process of presenting your design to established companies.
- Becoming a First Time GM: Established experienced GMs provide tips and tricks to help anyone become a GM.
- Fundamentals of Game Design: Game Designers discuss how they begin the process of creating and refining a new game design.

Again, these are just suggestions that you can make; if someone offers to host a seminar/panel related to gaming, and you can accommodate them, do so.

Podcasts: It's likely that someone that frequents your store runs or is a part of a podcast or twitch stream about gaming. Ask them to host a seminar or workshop on podcasting or a live podcast during your Pop-Up Gen Con event.

Gamer Flea Market/ Trade Table: Offering a table for gamers to buy/sell used items may seem counterintuitive to sales, however, it's a great way to draw new people to your store. Some stores provide this as a free service; some stores will ring these through their cash register as consignment sales, taking 10-20 percent commission. Some will make it a donation/pay what you want table for charity. Any of these options would be fine with Gen Con.

Game Designer Playtesting: With the rapid growth of board games, and aspiring Board Game designers, run a playtesting event for aspiring designers. You may also have a local Meetup group that tests game prototypes. Encourage them to host something at your Pop-Up Gen Con event.

You can outsource this as well. One of the largest groups that organizes events is called UnPub; another is called Protospiel. These groups are always looking for space that their designers can have a table to playtest games. The groups are also self-sufficient; you just need to provide the tables, and they'll provide the games and the GMs; reach out to any of these groups if you have extra table space.

Scheduled Events

Demos, full play sessions, and/or companion events that are scheduled for a specific date/time and where attendees can sign up to participate.

Although not required, we strongly recommend you consider scheduling actual events, allowing your Pop-Up Gen Con attendees to sign up for at least some events in advance. Reserving a seat at a specific time for a specific event is a core mechanism of how Gen Con operates and will help give your event that "Gen Con" feel.

There are several different ways you can schedule events with your attendees. If your store already has an online method for registering events, it's fine to use that. If you don't, it's also fine to post signup sheets and let people sign up manually. Other options include using online scheduling tools is fine too.

Be sure and post your schedule in advance, in your store, on your website, etc. It's a great way to get people interested.

Staff

The more events you run, the more successful your Pop-Up Gen Con will be and we recognize this may require additional people to run those events. Look to your staff to help run demos and if you need additional support, reach out to local gaming groups. If you have a group that meets weekly at your game store, ask them to help.

Additionally, there are third-party companies that run events on behalf of publishers, that may be willing to run events at your store. One of the largest companies of this type is Envoy. You're welcome to reach out to any group you feel would be able to run events that would be a good fit for your Pop-Up Gen Con.

Awards/Prizes

We encourage you to offer prizes for any events you run. Additional prizes we suggest could be free play passes should your store use them, or store credit/discount coupons. You could also award tickets for prize drawings, giving away demo copies of the games you received (but only after Pop-Up Gen Con).

Note that neither Gen Con nor Alliance can provide any additional prize support other than ribbons at this time.

Marketing

It goes without saying that the more you market the more you generate interest and eventually sales. Use all available resources and means at your disposal. Be creative!

Gen Con will promote Pop-Up Gen Con, but you know your community and customers best.

Product Display

A good display is a great way to generate interest in your Pop-Up Gen Con event. If you have a window display available, dedicate a section for this. While you can't display the actual product until Gen Con, wrap boxes and display them a month out. Put question marks on the boxes; anything to build intrigue. If you are running more events than just demos, include these games in the display as well.

In store display, again build intrigue. Create a "Staff Pick" notation which can go a long way to increasing sales.

Forums

Approved Pop-Up Gen Con retailers are granted access to the Pop-Up Gen Con retailer-only forum on gencon.com. This is a great way to share information, feedback, best practices etc. with other participating Pop-Up Gen Con retailers.

Forums are moderated, although for direct questions please email us.
